OUR NEW PRESIDENT.

The attention of the country must, within a few days, be turned from the dead to the living. Our late President is dead. The man who was the choice of the American people was shot down by an assassin without a purposeless, and now lies in his grave. But the Government of which he was the chosen head, lives. The pistol of the assassin cannot endanger its life. The latter rests upon the will of the people. The sympathy of the governed has, in this sad calamity, been exhibited with a degree of loyalty that is as broad as the country, and as intense as it is undivided. It has not been marred by a tinge of partisanship or sectionalism. Figuratively speaking, the whole people, irrespective of party, sect, color or section, have stood with bared heads, and with feelings of sincere and intense grief, before the body of the man who was the executive head of the Nation, and this is the atmosphere that surrounds the memory of the distinguished dead. This is a testimonial, too, to the character of the man. It is not offered merely to the office, for not everyone who has been President had such a hold upon the affections of the people. He was a pure man, one of the people, self-made, able, and had exhibited a purpose to discharge, as President of the whole country, fairly and honestly the duties of the high office. Inspired by the fear of God and respect and confidence of his fellow men, and with an ardent desire to advance the interests of his country, he was moving along in the sphere of duty when stricken down. His life has gone out. He is no longer with us. As an active, living people, however, having charge of institutions committed to us in trust and which we are charged to transmit to those who shall follow, we may not linger on the grave of the dead, but turn to the living form that now sits at the head of this government.

THE CABINET RESIGNS.

Last Thursday, September 22, the Cabinet, through Secretary Blaine, tendered their resignation to President Arthur at a Cabinet meeting held at the Capitol, after the President was sworn in. The act was accompanied by an expression of the warmest sentiments of personal regard, and the President was given to understand that the members of the Cabinet desired only to relieve him of all embarrassment without regard to past political events. The President with formality said that he did not desire to accept the tendered resignations and would esteem it a personal favor if they would continue in the discharge of their duties. The condition of the public business and sensitiveness of the public mind in view of the recent great national bereavement warranted him in asking this indulgence at their hands. Secretary Blaine assured the President that he could depend upon them to use their best efforts to transmute the country and to aid him in the performance of his duties in the present trying circumstances. It is understood, however, that the resignations have not been formally declined or accepted, but the Cabinet will simply continue to discharge their duties until a more suitable time arrives for the decision of the question of their attention. It may safely be said that before the close of the next week a proclamation will be issued by the President calling the Senate in executive session. The time fixed will not be later than the 18th of October. It is understood that the President was adverse to the calling of the session, but has yielded to the weight of Senatorial opinion, which has been freely expressed yesterday and today. In declining to accept the resignations of the Cabinet, President Arthur did not commit himself to anything definite. He remarked that under the present distressing circumstances he could not be expected to give his attention to national affairs except such as demanded consideration and therefore any thought to the subject of selecting his advisors. His request was that the present Cabinet continue in the discharge of their duties leaving the question of resignations until such times as he can determine what is best for him to do.

A Cargo of 300 tons of human bones arrived in Bristol harbor on the 22d, consigned to a firm of English manufacturers of manure. The bones are supposed to be those of the defenders of Plevna, and were shipped at Constantinople. The venerable Peter Cooper, who says that human bones make the finest kind of manure, asserts that it is a common thing for the British to buy human bones, and many cargoes of such have been used in enriching English lands. He added that he often heard that England was manured with bones taken from the battlefield of Waterloo. The fact that in the cargo at Bristol there were whole limbs, and that hair still clung to parts of skulls, will not tend to lessen the horror of the discovery or the brutal nature of the people engaged in the horrible traffic.

party, and of the country in general. It pointed plainly to an era of good feeling, and the responsive utterances since the late calamity tell upon the country, cannot be mistaken.

Gen. Arthur is a man of ability. The only question is whether he is capable of being himself. He is full of sound common sense, and if he shall follow his own inclinations, he will follow out the line of policy indicated by his predecessor, avoid or resist antagonizing influences and factions, and will succeed; otherwise he will fail, and fail as disastrously as did Tyler and Fillmore and Johnson.

The country will now begin to weigh the acts of President Arthur. Upon him the eyes of the people in general and of politicians in particular will be turned. His measure will soon be taken. Therefore it is important to him and to his party that he start out right, in order that he may gain that confidence which is now held in suspense. He cannot afford to lose any ground at the outset, especially as at the beginning he is likely to strike what the country will consider the keynotes of his administration.

At the same time it is safe to say, the Republican party as a whole is anxious to be pleased with Gen. Arthur, and to be able to endorse his course and give him a generous and cordial support.

NEW POINT.

For the first time New York city gives us a President and Ohio probably the last time.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR has issued a proclamation calling the Senate together on October 10th.

THE extreme emaciation of the President was a surprise to the undertaker and embalmer. It was possible to clasp the leg above the knee with one hand.

It is a singular coincidence that the only Presidents bearing the name of Abraham have been assassinated. Abraham Lincoln and James Abraham Garfield.

It is a coincidence of historical importance that President Garfield died upon the anniversary of the battle of Chickamauga, where he was most distinguished for gallantry.

CONTRIBUTIONS to the Garfield fund are again pouring in rapidly, and Boston alone says she will raise a quarter of a million. No doubt the whole sum of a half million will be raised to be given to Mrs. Garfield and her children.

There is no question about it now, the Garfield fund will be made up. As has been reported, $157,000 has been invested for Mrs. Garfield's benefit, and at the present rate with which contributions are coming in, the $250,000 will soon be made up.

Forty thousand people viewed the remains of the late President as they lie in state in Washington last Thursday. At night it was in such a state of decomposition that it was requested by Mrs. Garfield that the coffin be closed. On Friday funeral services were conducted by the late President's pastor. At 3 p. m., the body was conveyed to the funeral train and carried to Cleveland.

Onto has given three Presidents to the nation, but the combined length of their administrations has been only a little over four years and a half. Harrison died April 4, 1841, thirty days after his inauguration; Garfield had been President six months and fifteen days when he died, while Hayes alone served out his entire term. The total of service is four years, seven months, and fifteen days.

ONE of the most pitiable sights reported in connection with the President's death, is the scene described when his aged mother was told of her son's death. The old lady, lacking one day of being 80 years old, was almost prostrated with grief, and exclaimed with great sorrow, that she would soon follow him. In the thought that he was prepared she heroically took consolation, and in the belief that she would join him soon, she took her only comfort.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR's most intimate friends say he will not make the White House his residence this season; but will use it for executive business only. The material influences which possibly helped to hasten the death of the late President, and which prostrated little James Garfield and twelve of the attendants of the late President, is of itself a warning to Arthur, who is not acclimated to Washington in summer time, not to risk his life in such a habitation.

AND STILL ANOTHER.

Another train robbery has occurred; not in Missouri this time, but on the borders of Texas. Last Friday, as the eyes of all good people were turned toward the funeral of our late President, three more boys, without masks, robbed an entire train on the Iron Mountain railroad. The following is a brief account telegraphed to the Little Rock, Ark., Gazette immediately after the robbery:

"The train on the Iron Mountain & Southern railroad, which left Texarkana at eight o'clock last night was boarded at Hope by three young men. After passing Prescott and when near Kensett they suddenly drew revolvers and ordered the conductor to stop the train, which he did. They then proceeded to make the passengers throw up their hands and went through them, getting seven hundred dollars. They then visited the express car, opened the messenger's safe, and took thirty thousand dollars in currency. Before leaving the train they threw a package containing fifteen thousand dollars back, under the impression that it was worthless."

The president of the Iron Mountain railroad immediately offered a reward of $5,000 for the arrest and conviction of each of the robbers, and it is deemed impossible for them to make their escape. Armed parties are scouring the country in all directions.

The Motive Power.

The most beautiful illustration of perfect mechanism and wonderful strength to be found on the globe is a steam engine. It is the emblem of conscious power, and will work away with 30 or 40 heavily laden cars as easily as you would take a pound weight and toss it about, or push a baby carriage down hill. Isn't it a picture to look at it stands calmly on the rails—every joint and band throwing back the rays of the sun like burnished gold, the engineer's cab looking as neat as a lady's parlor? Did you ever think how wonderful this grand machine would be without the power to start into life the wonderful eggs and levers? Let us point a moral from it. Is simple sketch and apply it to every day business life? You will see at a glance that the point in the illustration is the motive power. You can't start the engine without steam, and the steam house won't run successfully without the energy and push of the motive power. The principle is the same in both cases—the steam runs the engine and the live man the business. They would both be valueless without the motive power. We have labored for years to perfect our business machine, we've strengthened the bands, oiled the eggs and introduced a great many new features. We think now that it makes good time on the track and we want you to come and see it work. We have been obliged to get more room and have moved into the store room just east of King & Prouds's drug store, where you can see the finest line of Furniture in Holt county. Nor can my stock of Coffins and undertaking goods be surpassed in Northwest Missouri. The finest hearse in the northwest is also my property. A. M. JACOBS, Oregon, Mo.

THE NEXT VICE PRESIDENT.

The object President Arthur will have in calling the Senate to meet in extra session is for that body to organize and provide for the succession.

It is not true, however, that if Arthur should die to-night there would be anarchy. The country could, in an emergency, get along with a surprisingly small amount of government.

If President Arthur should die, the Secretary of State would call the Senate, and it would meet and be organized, and the President pro tempore of the Senate would assume the Presidency of the United States until an election could be held.

It is not true that there is but one life between order and anarchy in this country. It is entirely proper, however, to convene the Senate at once.

One of the questions that will crowd for solution is that of calling an extra session of Congress.

Thanks to Mr. Conkling, there is no President pro tempore of the Senate, and as Congress has not been called together there is no Speaker of the House.

The Senate has a caucus organized at the special session following the 4th of March. This year, owing to the fact that the President did not appoint Conkling's man Secretary of the Treasury, there was a rupture.

The consequence was, the Senate adjourned without organization, and, thanks to Mr. Conkling, the majority of the Senators holding seats are Democrats. The credentials of the New York Senators and General Burnside's successor, will not be received until the Senate is an organized body.

The next in succession to Arthur, therefore, will be a Democrat, and it does not seem impossible or improbable that Mr. Pendleton may be chosen.

NEARLY 2,000 immigrants landed at Castle Garden on the 17th inst., making a total number since January 1, of $28,000, an increase of 5,000 over the total of 1880 for the same period, and an increase of 130 over the total for the same period in 1879. The increase over last year for the short space between September 1 and 15 is 2,000, and the authorities at Castle Garden expect that the October immigration, usually only exceeded by that of May and June, will be very large. In should be remembered in considering these figures that the immigration of this year, has brought in, as a rule, a sturdy, honest, hard-working class of people, in almost every case provided with a little capital of savings, and in many cases with comfortable sums of money. Under these circumstances, every shipload represents a positive addition to the wealth of this country.

Ayer's Ague Cure is the only medicine in existence which may be considered an absolute antidote for fever and ague, and kindred diseases.
